SENTENCE APPROVED

Plea of Magness, Marine Musician and Bridgeroom, Did Not Avail.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 19.—
Having been adjudged of desertion from the navy by a court-martial at Philadelphia, Secretary Metcalf to-day approved the sentence in the case of Charles J. Hartlove, musician, first-class, alias C. J. Magness, who left the Service in order to marry the daughter of the late Senator Arthur P. Gorman, or Maryland. service in order to marry the daughter of the late Senator Arthur P. Gorman, of Maryland.

The punishment to be meted out to the young man is imprisonment for one year at the naval prison, Portsmouth, N. H., at the end of which he is to be dishonorably discharged. He is to perform police duties during his confinement and to forfelt all pay except a small sum for necessary prison expenses. By good behavior Magness may reduce his actual sentence to eight months.

The plea put up by Magness's counsel was that Magness "was in a state of mind that might be called delirium of anticipation of his honeymoon."

ONE STRUCK CONDUCTOR AND THREE WERE ARRESTED

Acting on information received in a telegram from the chief of nolice of Newport News yesterday afterneen that three negroes one of whom struck a conductor there with a rock just before leaving, were beating their way here on a freight train, Watchman Argle, of the Chesnpeake and Ohio Railway, last night arrested J. Christian, E. Hurt and A. Wallace on the charge of treepass. It is not known which of the men is guilty, as the name was not given in the message. Two of them, however, correspond with the description. They will be held until the Newport News authorities arrive.

Miss Morrison in "Faust."

Gothe's famous classic drama, "Faust," was presented last night in the Academy of Music, the only weakness of any importance discernible being in the part of Faust, played by Howard Davies, who was notably weak and unemotional in those scenes which appeal to the highest motives in human nature. Miss Rosabel Morrison, playing the innocent pensant maid, Marguerite, portrayed her part splendidly and with feeling, reaching the climaxes with a sympathy that was nearly as intense as Goethe meant it should be. Edward N. Hoyt depicted Mephisto in a style that would have appealed to the taste of that far famous gentleman of the lower shades. He was at all times good, never falling into laxness. Howard Davies, as Faust, failed to rise to the splendid opportunities offered him in his gart, though his performance did improve a little in the higher emotional scenes, such as in the second act, where the Mephistophelian machinations of his ever-present consort were revealed to the peasant maid, and in the fourth act the scene of the reverty of the demons.

"Faust" is to Goethe as "Hamilet" is to mons.

"Faust" is to Goethe as "Hamlet" is to Shakespeare. It conveys a moral. Weakness and hesitancy brought about the downfall of the Shakespearean character, and there is a moral in that. In "Faust" one learns, among other things, that honesty is the best policy, even in the sale of souls and the exchange of love. A. R. W. M.

"Marrying Mary."

The Rev. Thorley Throckmorton, in the musical play of "Marrying Mary." in which Florence Gear and a large company will be seen at the Academy on Saturday, matinee and night, represents in a satirical way a type of clergyman that is none too rare in many cities of wealth. Holding his position at the sufferance of the money-bags of his parish, he is apt to wink at their little indiscretions and view with more leniency than is right.
